Travel Bloggers Guidelines

Guidelines

Thank you for expressing your interest in writing for Accessible Travel Press

We look forward to reading your stories. To make the blogging easier, we share some guidelines with you.

1. Our followers are mainly travelers with a disability. Some are experienced travelers, others never have traveled. Please consider this when you share your stories with us.
2. The content must be 100% original. It should not be published anywhere else, besides at your own blog or website.
3. We ask you to write in English. If this is not your native language, we will help with grammar and translation if needed. We also will make the final edits, without profoundly changing your story or main topic. You will see the edited post before we publish it online.
4. The blogs you write are about your travel experiences in a city, a series of museums, a region, outdoors activities. Your holiday. It is not a commercial promoting accommodation for free.
5. It is allowed to mention accommodation by name. Locations (airports, museums, train stations, public transport services, ferries, parks, tourist highlights, restaurants, theme parks etc.) you recommend, will be added to the accessibility information in the Country Guides at our website, where we will give you credit for it.
6. We encourage you to use your own text as well as your own photos. If you chose otherwise, make sure no copyright law is violated.
7. Your story should fit somewhere between 300 and 900 words.
8. We publish without schedules, however we use several social media to highlight a new post as well as our frequently sent newsletter.

If you have any questions, feel free to email us at info@accessibletravel.online.
