Travel Writers Guidelines

Welcome at the Author's table at Accessible Travel Press

We look forward to reading and publishing your stories. To make the writing easier, we share some guidelines with you.

1. Our followers are mainly travelers with a disability. Some are experienced travelers, others never have traveled. Please consider this when you share your articles with us.

2. The content must be 100% original. It should not be published anywhere else, besides at your own blog or website.

3. We ask you to write in English. If this is not your native language, we will help with grammar and translation if needed. We also will make the final edits, without profoundly changing your story or main topic.

4. The articles you write are about your travel experiences in a city, a series of museums, a region, outdoors activities. Your holiday. It is not a commercial advertorial promoting accommodation for free.

5. It is allowed to mention accommodation by name. It is recommended to mentions locations by name (airports, museums, train stations, public transport services, ferries, parks, tourist highlights, restaurants, theme parks etc.)

6. We encourage you to use your own text as well as your own photos. If you chose otherwise, make sure no copyright law is violated.

7. Your story should fit somewhere between 300 and 900 words.

Checklist

We encourage you to share your content regularly. Monthly submissions are not required but very much encouraged.

Materials that we need from you

- Your profile photo
- Your bio (100 words), city and country
- 2-3 images or photos per article, one must be landscape format
- You can share links to your social media profiles in your content
- Check all links you mention in your article

Tips to increase reach

Follow other authors at Accessible Travel Press.
Push reach by actively engaging social media posts by us and other authors. Liking and sharing helps, commenting even better.

Invite Accessible Travel Press in your posts as a collaborator, like we invite you when your article is published at our website.
Share a post by Accessible Travel Press on Facebook or LinkedIn to increase traffic. One of our goals is to reach over 10.000 followers on each platform we use.

Safe travels, happy writings!
